Mixed Nutz Gets Rave Reviews in New York

Last month, the New York Television Festival premiered Bollywood Dreams—an episode of the long-awaited animated series Mixed Nutz. In the episode, Sanjay, who recently emigrated from Mumbai to Canada, develops a Bollywood-inspired crush on his teacher, Miss Pickleberry. In true Bollywood style, the episode features dance, music and crazy antics in the face of hopeless love!

In addition to Sanjay, each episode of Mixed Nutz centers on Babak, Damaris, Jae and Adele—an irresistible group of nine-year old kids from different places just trying to fit in. The series takes place in a small town called Dyver City, where the kids face the daily tribulations of elementary school with the added pressures of being from different places. Whether they are facing their militaristic, former Navy Seal swim teacher or learning to haggle in an old Persian Bazaar, the kids always find a way to work together and come out on top.

Anticipation for Mixed Nutz is based upon its interesting history, which has a unique, independent development and production background. Producers Aly Jetha and Shabnam Rezaei got the support of several foundations to finance 13
22-minute episodes of the series to teach kids tolerance and diversity in a fun and entertaining way. “It is important to expose kids to all cultures at a very young age,” notes Jetha. He also points out, however, that the episodes are not “culture heavy.” “Culture sits in the background and is present in a very subtle way. It is absolutely critical to make sure the cartoon is entertaining. Otherwise kids won’t watch it.”

Jetha and Rezaei assembled an Emmy Award-winning team led by Alfred Gimeno and Randy Rogel, two of the creative forces behind Animaniacs and Pinky and the Brain, and other industry classics. Animation veteran Glen Kennedy, who trained under Bill Hannah, leads the animation team at Big Bad Boo Studios in Vancouver. Other veterans from Disney, Nickelodeon and Warner Brothers round out the talent.

Having just completed the 11th episode of the series (which targets four- to eight-year-olds), Jetha and Rezaei were excited to premiere the series in New York. Next month Jetha and Rezaei head to the MIPCOM Junior and MIPCOM markets in France in hopes of continuing the success of their fun, multi-culturally themed series. Based on the reaction in New York, we think they’ll do just fine.
